

Her cascading hair spreads like moonbeams on a soft pillow tracing the roots of the tree whose branches and leaves shadow the lines in her face and the veins in her hands Her fingers are still in poses that reflect her body arms and legs lightly contoured by the sheet which seems to float a hair's breadth above her skin its draping reminding me of gentle calligraphy
with letters of coral
river roadways
circuits and maps
memories
an orchid's
blossom
a child's brushstroke
convolutions
of my brain
infinite
mirroring
dendrites
capillaries
constellations
of the
branching
chandelier
suspended
above her
casting
dim golden
highlights
upon all
these nervous
systems
